- D2: EP-A-0 871 066 (AGFA-GEVAERT) 14 October 1998 cited in the application
- D3: EP-A-0 648 765 (CIBA-GEIGY) 19 April 1995 & US 5 607 624 A cited in the application
- D4: GB-A-2 322 861 (CIBA) 9 September 1998

- D6: WO 80 01566 A (SANDOZ) 7 August 1980 & US 4 611 016 A cited in the application

- IV. The subject-matter of independent claims 1, and 11 to 16 is already known/not inventive (see the grounds for these objections). The requisite unity of invention (Rule 13.1 PCT) therefore no longer exists inasmuch as a technical relationship involving one or more of the same or corresponding special technical features in the sense of Rule 13.2 PCT does not exist between the subject-matter of the following groups of dependent claims:

Any new compound or group of compounds, showing a common linking feature not known from the prior art, used in any of the independent claims must be regarded as a separate invention.

The alleged invention resides in the use of benzofuran-2-ones in photographic materials as Dox-scavengers. However, said benzofuran-2-ones are generally known as stabilizers e.g. for stabilizing polymer compositions against degradation. Thus any use except the use as Dox scavengers must be regarded as a separate invention, even the use of novel compounds as polymer stabilizers.

It is thus presently not clear how many separate "inventions" exist in the present application.

V.

1. Claims 12 and 13, claiming a photographic or digital recording material comprising a compound of formula IV, and the respective use as an additive, lack novelty in view of document D1, in contrast to Article 33(1) and (2) PCT. D1 is directed to stabilized photographic materials. In addition to the triazine stabilizer used in D1, the material may also comprise benzofuranones as detailed in the paragraph bridging pages 30 and 31. At least some of them are covered by formula (IV) of D1.

2. The subject-matter of claims 1 to 16 lack an inventive step regarding documents D2 to D6. (Article 33(1) and (3) PCT)

2.1 Benzofuran-2-ones are known to be effective stabilizers, stabilizing organic components against degradation by light, oxidation, and/or heat. A variety of compounds differing in different substitution patterns are known from the prior art documents, cf. also those documents of the International Search Report which are not cited herein. The ensemble of documents shows that all compounds cited therein are effective stabilizers provided that they are based on a benzofuran-2-one nucleus.

2.2 Present claim 12 defines a colour photographic material or digital recording material comprising a compound of formula IV. First, it is submitted that in this claim the purpose for preventing migration of oxidized developer is not longer of relevance. Benzofuranones can be used in photographic materials to stabilize polymeric layers (cf. D1, pages 30 to 31) and oxidized developers are definitely no problem in digital recording materials. Moreover, compounds of formula IV are already covered by the general formula of claim 2 of D6. Even when regarded as a selection in view of D6, applicants did not provide the evidence for an unexpected advantage obtained by this selection. Nevertheless, the skilled worker starting from D6 would expect that compounds of formula IV are effective stabilizers for polymeric materials as used in photographic and digital recording materials.

These observations apply also to the subject-matter of claim 13.

2.3 Turning now to claims 14 to 16 it is submitted that these claims lack in inventive step in view of D3 to D6. Both compounds of formulae V and VI are covered by the general teaching of D6. Especially, compounds 10, 11, 41, 46, and 62 are very similar to present formula V. Those compounds are not within the present claims, since "t" must not be 1 or 2. However, the relevance of this arbitrary selection has not been proved.

2.4 D3 (tables 1 and 2) shows compounds differing from those of formula V only in that the 5- and 7-positions carry a t-butyl group instead of a t-pentyl group. However, it is obvious for those skilled in the art that the function of the compound is not affected by replacing a bulky group by a homologous group. Neither did the applicants prove the contrary. Cf. also D4, claim 2, and page 20, bottom)

2.5 Moreover, compound 115 of D5 differs from the definition of formula VI only in that the phenyl ring carries an alkoxy group, which is presently not included. The skilled worker, knowing that the R₁-O- group in formula (I) of D5 is essential for the compounds of D5, would nevertheless expect a sufficient performance as stabilizer, cf. also D6 and other documents, which do not require such a group providing efficient stabilizers.

- 2.6 Document D2 is especially relevant for claim 1 and teaches that benzofuran-2-ones of formula (I) can be used as Dox-scavengers. The exemplary compounds of D2 have been disclaimed in present claim 1 by a proviso. However, the general teaching of D2 is still within the scope of claim 1. Claim 1 and the dependent claims lack an inventive step in view of D2, since a disclaimer may establish novelty over an anticipating document but fails to establish an inventive step.

VIII. The present application does not comply with the requirements of Article 6 PCT (clarity) for the reasons set forth below:

1. The claims are not concise. E.g. claim 1 claims a process wherein an enormous number of compounds of formula (I) can be used. Due to the huge number of substituents and combinations thereof it appears to be very difficult and requires undue burden to verify whether a specific embodiment falls within the scope of the claim.
2. Index "q" in claims 12 and 14 is apparently not defined. Moreover, the substituents R_2 , R_3 , R_5 , and R_7 to R_{11} in claim 14 are not defined.
